Health Works CD ROM
Educational Software for Children
Grades 4 through 7

The Health Works CD-ROM was created by the New York State Department of Health to help children learn about HIV infection and AIDS. CDs are free of charge to educational and human service agencies in New York State. This software runs on both Windows 3.1, '95 or higher, or Macintosh computer systems.

Children play four interactive computer games: Hospital, Party, School, and Street Corner. During each animated scene, players are asked how they would respond to situations similar to those they might confront in real life. These questions test their understanding of HIV/AIDS risks and their ability to avoid risky behavior.

To get advice before answering any questions, players may enlist the help of one or more advisors: Doctor, Teacher, Clergy, Patient, Friend, or AIDS Hotline. Feedback is provided by a narrator who corrects assumptions and points out the danger when a risky choice is made. Positive reinforcement is given for correct answers and choices supportive of HIV prevention.

Hospital: Emphasizes scientific facts about HIV transmission

Party: Raises issues of sexual responsibility and AIDS

School: Focuses on myths of casual transmission

Street Corner: Stresses the HIV risks of drug use
